Novel adeno-associated virus serotype 1 polynucleotide useful for preparation of medicament for delivery of a transgene to a host.

Claim 7; Page 99-101; 108pp; English.

The patent discloses an adeno-associated virus serotype 1 (AAV-1) DNA which is characterised by two inverted terminal repeats (ITR) and open reading frames for rep and capsid (cap) proteins. The rep reading frame encodes four proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV hence is useful for transforming host cells, and in the preparation of services. of a

The rep reading frame cances four proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding cregions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vectors vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV medicament for the delivery of transgene to a host. The present sequence is an AAV-1 cap protein VP2 which is useful in the production of crecombinant viral vector for gene delivery

The rep reading frame encodes three and capsid (cap) proteins. The rep reading frame cape reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AV comedicament for the delivery of transgene to a host. The present sequence is an AAV-1 cap protein VP1 which is useful in the production of crecombinant viral vector for gene delivery
